member how I loved her, when a little guileless child;
her in the cradle, as she looked on me and smiled;

I blessed the glorious Giver, "who doeth all things well."

ight that earth had never smiled upon so fair a flower;
utiful, it well might grace the bowers where angels dwell, weft its fragrance to his throne, "who doeth all things well."

brave eagle soar'd from his dear native eyrie,
His wing on the wind and his eye on the sun,

Nestled down deep in their plume-girdled home.

Flashes of Liberty,

en burst with sorrow that free, noble heart.

All that is earthly is doomed to decay.

SUNSHINE OF THE HEART.

Oh! don't go sighing through the world
There's sunshine all the way;
If you'll but do the acts that e'er
Reflect the blessed day.

It glistens in the grateful tear,
That flows for kindly deed,
And quivers in the voice that sobs
Its thanks, for help, in need.

It sparkles oft in radiant smiles,
At tones tuned in the heart,
And gladeth o'er the page of life
With beams that ne'er depart.

It dwelleth in the loving look,
That answers to our own,
And swelleth up a spring of joy,
To selfish taste unknown.

To smooth the rugged ways of life,
With carpets, soft and light,
Woven of conscience, free from frowns,
And impulse acted right.

It cheers the darkest hour on earth—
Steals under sorrows deep;
And even smiles above the path,
That leads to dreamless sleep.

Selected Tale.

THE LAWYER'S BRIDE.

JUDGE REMSEN'S FIRST CLIENT.

Old Judge Remsen, of Cowan, was fond of telling his early experience at the bar. My first case, he would say, came upon me unexpectedly, after I had waited a considerable time for a client. The way I came to get it was this:

A young girl, Helen Montressor, was to be tried at our County Court for stealing a breast-pin, valued at four dollars, and $20 dollars in gold, from the trunk of her employer, James Westerly, merchant, in the town of Bedford. The theft, which was detected five weeks before, occasioned quite a talk at the time, as the girl was beautiful, and Wesley and his wife Eunice were anything but that, besides being generally detested. People said Helen had been treated shamefully by her mistress, who was jealous of her; and it was even hinted that there had been foul play in the prosecution for theft. The subsequent trial of a gang of horse-thieves had so absorbed public attention, that the case of Helen Montressor was forgotten, and no one seemed to care for her fate. But when she was placed in the prisoner's box, her beauty riveted the eye, and when the Judge asked her who was her counsel, and she modestly replied she had none, and no money to pay a lawyer, there was not a member present who would not willingly have undertaken her case. The Judge, after looking round for a moment fixed his eye on me, and said, 'Mr Remsen, you will please act as this young lady's counsel.' I started as though I had been shot. Luckily a juror was taken ill, and the court adjourned till ten next morning, or I am afraid I should have made sad work with my client's case.

As I left the court room I looked at my watch; it was eleven, so I had but twenty-three hours to prepare. I called upon the District Attorney and asked to see the indictment, and the evidence, taken before the Justice of the Peace. As he tumbled over a pile of documents in search of the papers, he said 'the Judge must have spite against you, Remsen, to put you in such a tight place, and you a green hand. No offence,' he added as he observed the rising color of my cheeks, 'no offence: I simply meant that you are inexperienced. There are the documents; take them home with you—only be sure to bring them to court to-morrow morning. You will see that your client has not a chance.'

I was annoyed at this light reference to my client, for whom I already entertained deep respect, and believed innocent; but I said nothing. Hastening to my office, I locked myself in and commenced the analysis of my case. The evidence consisted of the testimony of James and Eunice Wesley, Sarah Brown, seamstress, and Catherine Boyce, a domestic, and Thomas Hannegan, a man of all work, employed by the Wesleys. Hannegan's evidence seemed straight forward and truthful, and so did the servant girl. I made up my mind that they were not unfriendly to my client, and I would seek an interview with them, although I must make a journey to Bedford. In Miss Brown's testimony I at once detected intense malice, and determined to harrow her unmercifully in cross examination. Wesley's evidence was similar in style and matter as that of Hannegan's; but Mrs. Wesley's was full, discursive and acrimonious—such as that 'she always believed Helen to be a viper, but her husband upheld that trollop.' To my mind the case seemed clear; Mrs. Wesley herself put those things in Helen's trunk.

I next went to the Court House and requested Mr. Mace, the sheriff, who lived in the wing of the building, to introduce me to the prisoner. He conducted me to the cell. Although the bolts clanged heavily as they sprang from the locks, our entrance did not seem to attract her attention. She was standing with clasped hands before her grated window, gazing at the sky. The sheriff touched her arm, and said, 'Miss Montressor, Mr. Remsen is the lawyer who is to manage your case, and he wants to see you.' She started, turned quickly round, and made an inclination of her head, to indicate her readiness, to listen, but she said not a word.—The Sheriff left the cell and we were alone. Conscious that every moment was precious I said:

"Miss Montressor, we must throw aside all ceremony and communicate frankly upon this painful business. I believe you are innocent. The thing is to prove you so. If you will tell me frankly what your experience has been with the Wesleys, my task may be lightened.'

I then put a series of questions, and learned that she was fifteen years old that she had lived with Mrs. Wesley, who had been married eight years; that she had lived with a kind old gentleman named Gregory, who had taught her to call him grandpapa; that Mrs. Wesley, who was then called Miss Nesmith, lived with Mr. Gregory, also; that he seemed afraid of Miss Nesmith; that Miss Nesmith inherited all his property and married Mr. Wesley about a month after he died; that she told her not to call him grandpapa any more, for he wasn't any relation to her; that on the day Mr. Gregory died he gave her a sealed packet, and told her not to let Eunice see it, but to give it to a certain lawyer when he returned to town, for it would make her a rich young lady, and that he cried and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much; that she fell asleep with the packet in her lap, and when she awoke it was gone, and she never dared ask any questions about it; that Mrs. Wesley hated her, and beat her, and treated her like a slave, and that she sometimes thought of drowning herself, she was so miserable; that Mr. Wesley said improper things to her; that he was a bad man, but weak in his wife's control; that the day on which her trunk was searched she was sent on an errand to the minister's, was gone about an hour and a half, and on her return, was taken up stairs to see her trunk opened before she had taken off her bonnet and shawl; then she was sure Mrs. Wesley had put things in her trunk while she was out, because she (Ellen) had overhauled it that morning, and they were not in then; but whether Mr. Wesley knew about it she could not say, although she rather thought he did, because he looked guilty when his wife was opening the trunk.

Telling the poor girl to cheer up, I went to the Sheriff's sitting room, where I found Mrs. Mace. I at once informed her that in my opinion Miss Montressor was a persecuted girl, and hoped she would try to cheer her up, so that she could enter the court room with a good heart on the morrow; this the kind hearted woman promised to do, and I hastened to my office. My brain was in a whirl. Gregory—grandpapa—the packet which was to make her a rich young lady—its mysterious disappearance! What could all this mean? Was old Mr. Gregory really Ellen's grandfather? Was the packet his last will and testament, bequeathing his property to her? And had Eunice Nesmith, now Wesley, stolen it from the child as she slept, that she might clutch the property by virtue of a former will which had been forced from the old man? 'He cried, and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much!' Her own way about what? I felt very certain that I had got on the track of a great villiany, and thought I could understand the reason for Eunice Wesley's hatred of Helen, and her desire to blast the poor girl's character. After spending a half hour in arranging my plans, I ordered a carriage and drove to Bedford.

It was two when I reached the village. I wished first to see Hannegan, Wesley's serving man. By making a few cautious inquiries at the tavern, and disbursing half a dollar to the hostler, Hannegan was soon in my room. He was pleased to find that I was Ellen's friend, and on my promising never to let what he had said get to the ears of Mrs. Wesley, he told me that she had treated the poor girl like a dog; that he had seen her strike Ellen, and heard her threaten to kill her, and to ruin her reputation; and that he believed the breast pin and money had been put into the trunk by the old catamarin herself.

He stated what Ellen's behavior was when the articles were found in the trunk, and described the breast pin and money. The latter consisted of four half eagles, one of which had a hole in it, that had been made by Mr. Murch, the jeweller, so Mrs Wesley could put it on a ribbon, for a birth-day present for the minister's little boy; and that was one way Mrs. Wesley knew the money was hers. He also gave me a letter signed 'Eunice Gregory,' that he found in the yard that day, and which he maintained was in Mrs. Wesley's hand-writing. That had made him suspect that her name wasn't Nesmith before she was married to Wesley; and he had thought she might have been some relation to old Mr. Gregory who had died, and there must have been something bad to make her change her name.

This information made a deep impression on my mind, taken in connection with what Ellen had told me; besides the name Eunice Gregory seemed floating in my memory as though I had seen it connected with some event which had faded from recollection and was dimly recalled.

I dismissed Hannegan, and paid a visit to Mr Murch, the jeweller, told him who I was and for what I had called. He remembered the half eagle business—in fact it was on his record. He turned to see on what day the hole was made in the half eagle. It was on Wednesday, the 17th of March—the very day Helen's trunk was searched. I asked what hour the coin was delivered to Mrs. Wesley. He replied that she called for it about eleven in the forenoon, and that Miss Montressor's trunk was searched about one in the afternoon of the same day.

'That looks rather strange,' said I.—'Would you have any objections to attending the trial tomorrow with your books and testifying?'

'None at all,' he replied.

I turned to depart. At that moment Wesley entered the shop and was accosted by the jeweller, who gave me a wink to indicate who he was. We had never met before, so I regarded him at my leisure.—He was an evil looking man. Over his left eye was a queer shaped scar, which ran crookedly across his forehead. The instant I saw the scar, I felt as though the whole thing was clear. The scar, the description of which I so well remembered, brought the whole story freshly to my mind. I remembered now the name of Eunice Gregory—the child murderers—and there stood her accomplice under an assumed name.—Giving the jeweller a warning glance, I hastened to my carriage, drove furiously home, shut myself in my room, and determined to pass the entire night, if necessary, in preparation for the contest. I, wishing to clear my client of the charge made against her, expose the Wesley's, and oblige them to make restitution to the wronged and pillaged orphan.

I ransacked my memory to find something tangible concerning the past career of Eunice Gregory and her accomplice, but could find nothing. I had read the story many years before in a newspaper, the name of which I could not remember. I could not prove the Wesley's were the same parties, and should I mention my suspicions in court, the District Attorney would scout them as ridiculous and malicious inventions of my own, and the judge would charge the jury to pay no heed to them.—I must sap the characters of the Wesley's in my cross examination of their witnesses, and thus try to effect a breach sufficient to justify a direct assault, on a charge of conspiracy against Helen, and crush James Wesley on the witness stand. And I wove my meshes for the victim until the morning sun's rays streamed through the windows.

The court was opened, a jury empanelled, the case called; Helen Montressor placed in the prisoner's box, and the District Attorney's telling, merciless opening of the case completed, in what seemed to be but a few moments of time. Helen seemed to look more innocent than ever, and I resolved that full justice should be done her, if my resources could compass such a result. It is in such an hour that the lawyer feels the honor and dignity of his position—it is then that he also feels its responsibility.

The first witness was Charlotte Boyce. She had been called by her mistress to go up and see Helen's trunk searched; she went up and saw the breast pin and money found in it—tucked away in one corner.—By my cross-examination I elicited the fact that Helen had just come home from an errand (on which she had been sent over an hour,) when her trunk was searched, and had on her bonnet and shawl; that "she looked quite innocent and unconcerned till the things were found, and then she seemed astonished." On dismissing the witness, I gazed at the jury, but they sat with stern faces, as though resolved that nothing should make them clear the culprit. I called Miss Boyce back, saying I had forgotten a very important point.—This excited some attention, and when I asked her if Mrs. Wesley was in the habit of ill-treating the prisoner, everybody pricked up their ears. The girl hesitated and stammered and finally said she was.—'And why do you think so?' I asked.

'Because Mrs. Wesley beat her once with a large club, and threatened to kill her, and was scolding her. But don't ask me any more questions,' she suddenly exclaimed, 'or I shall lose my place!'

I glanced at Mrs. Wesley, and saw that she was regarding her servant with a look of intense malignity, and to annoy her, I appealed to the Court to protect the witness against the threatening looks of her mistress. This brought all eyes to a focus on Mrs. Wesley's ugly countenance, and she turned fairly white with indignation. The Judge told the witness to speak without fear, and if she lost her place by telling the truth, she would find plenty of better ones. Being satisfied with the impression made, I told the witness she might go, and the District Attorney permitted her to pass without questioning.

The next witness was Miss Sarah Brown, the seamstress—a rat-eyed, hatchet-faced, dapper little creature. 'She was at work for Mrs. Wesley at the time the theft was discovered. She met Helen the day before the trunk was searched, coming out of her mistress' room, and she looked so guilty she suspected she had been doing something wrong. The same day Mrs. Wesley spoke to her about the things being gone, and she told her her suspicions. Thereupon she thought it would be a good plan to search Helen's trunk: proposed to do it at once, but Mrs. Wesley preferred to wait. When the trunk was searched, the things were found in it, just as she expected they would be.'

When the witness was passed over to me, I asked in a careless tone, how she knew the money was in Mrs. Wesley's room the day she had met Helen coming thence.

'She knew it because Mrs. Wesley had told her. Couldn't be mistaken, for Mrs. W. had spoken about the half eagle with a hole in it, which she was going to present to the minister's boy.'

This I made her say over and over again, until there could be no mistake about it, and asked if she knew who made the hole in the half-eagle.

'Yes, Mr. March, the jeweler, made it.

'Is he in the room?' I asked.

'Yes, there he is, said she, pointing.

I told Mrs. Brown she could go, and the District Attorney requested that Mr. Murch should be sworn. The Attorney handed Murch the identical half-eagle, and asked if he recognized it. He said he did; that the magistrate who committed the prisoner had made a mark upon it.

'That's all; the witness is yours, Mr. Remsen.'

'Do you remember, Mr. Murch, on what day of the month you made the hole in the half-eagle?' I asked.

'It was the 17th of March,' said he.

'Why, that was the very day the prisoner's trunk was searched, was it not?' said I, turning to the District Attorney.

'That is the day mentioned in the indictment,' he replied.

Turning again to the witness, I said, 'Mr. Murch, please to recollect with precision; you heard the witness who preceded you, swear that Mrs. Wesley told her that the identical half-eagle, with the hole then made in it, was in her husband's trunk on or before the 16th of last March?'

'Yes,' said Murch, 'I heard her swear that, and was astonished, for Mrs. Wesley brought me the coin on the afternoon of the 16th, and told me I must have it fixed by noon next day; and at 11 on the 17th, she came for it, and at one that afternoon it was found in Miss Montressor's trunk.'

The District Attorney turned sharp around and gave the Wesleys a piercing look. Mrs W. sat immovable; but Wesley turned pale and fairly cowered beneath the gaze of the Attorney, who, I saw, was now convinced of the true facts of the case; and judge and jury seemed to be of the same mind I felt certain, then, of a verdict in my client's favor, but how was I to crush the Wesleys, and how win back her estate? I decided on my course.

Hannegan was next, and I showed by him that Mrs. Wesley had persecuted the prisoner in the most outrageous manner—beating her, threatening to kill her and to ruin her reputation, and treating her shamefully. His testimony excited so much indignation against the couple, that I longed for the moment to arrive when James Wesley should take the stand.—When Hannegan retired, Mrs. Wesley whispered to her husband, and he whispered to the Attorney. The latter seemed surprised, but announced the prosecution would there rest the case.

Everybody was surprised that the Wesleys were not called, and my plans were all disarranged. I divined at once that Mrs. Wesley had suggested this course to shield her husband and herself from cross-examination. Had the instinct of self-preservation told her what was coming?

I rose to open my case for the defence, and I began by stating that I had incontestible evidence that a conspiracy had been entered into to blast the character of my client, to enable the parties in the conspiracy to perform secret plans, which would fill the community with horror. I saw that everybody was prepared to believe most anything, and determined to waste no time in words. Said I requested that James Wesley might be sworn, and desired the judge to have Eunice Wesley removed while her husband was being examined. She was taken out by the sheriff, and I turned to question James Wesley.

'James Welsey, said I, sternly, 'how came that scar on your forehead?'

As the villain turned ghastly pale, staggered and clutched at the railing of the witness box for support, I felt assured of my man, and said:

'Answer me, Bob Harman; how come that scar on your forehead.

At the mention of the name 'Bob Harman,' the wretch fell back upon the seat and groaned, 'Oh don't—don't bring that agin me!'

'I shall bring that up and more too, unless you answer me truly about this pretended theft. Now, tell me—did not Eunice Gregory put those things in Miss Montressor's trunk?'

'Oh, my God! how did you know about Eunice Gregory? Don't bring that up now. It's gone by years ago,' groaned the wretched man.

'Answer me, then; did not your wife put those things in Miss Montressor's trunk?'

'Yes—she did—let the girl go, and don't ask me any more questions.'

The excitement now became overwhelming, and the witness was beginning to fear for his bodily safety—a fact I determined to use as an additional screw. 'I shall ask for a little more,' I replied, 'as I do not wish to expose you to the rage of this audience, if you'll answer promptly.—Where is the will that old Mr. Gregory executed, in which he made his grandchild, Helen Montressor, his heir, and which he gave her to give to his lawyer when he returned—the will your wife stole from the child as she lay sleeping.'

'Oh, Lord!' it's come at last!—just as I told her it would.'

'Where is the will?' I thundered.

'It is burnt,' he exclaimed, 'but Helen is his only surviving relation, and the will by which my wife got her property is a forged note.'

Having achieved everything, and not caring to prolong the painful scene, I asked the District Attorney if it would not be best to dismiss the case. He cheerfully assented, and Miss Montressor, who in her flush of agitation and thankfulness, looked more lovely than ever, was released from the custody of Mr. Mace, and placed in charge of his wife, while Wesley and his wife slunk away from public indignation.

The excitement was so great the court was adjourned till 3 P. M., and I was obliged to state, for the gratification of the crowd, how I managed to get on the track of the Wesleys. I said that many years before, I had read of an account of a murder of a child by its aunt, Eunice Gregory, assisted by her lover, one Bob Harman, for the purpose of possessing her niece's estate. In that account it was stated that Harman, at the time of the murder, had fallen down an area and gashed his forehead terribly, which afterward healed and left a peculiar scar. The hints I received from Ellen's story, and the letter signed Eunice Gregory, had set my memory at work, and when I met Wesley and observed the peculiar scar on his forehead, the whole thing flashed upon me, and I determined to make a bold push to expose them, and not only defend Helen against the charge of larceny, but wrench from her unnatural aunt the patrimony that had been withheld from her.

My explanation was received with applause, and a movement set on foot to have the Wesley's indicted for perjury; but it was never carried out, as they disappeared from that part of the country, and we all thought it best not to bring them back for any purpose whatever.

Helen secured her estate, and I secured Helen; and if you will go home with me, you shall have an introduction to her and the children.

The first case did the business for me all round, as by it I secured a great reputation, plenty of practice, a handsome wife and a large fortune.

A New England Martyr.

In his Annals of the American Pulpit, the Rev. Dr. Sprague records the remarkable career of the Rev. Hugh Peters who came to this country in 1655, and was settled over the First Church in Salem, Mass. He went back to the colonies, and there he became implicated in the political troubles of the times.

"Mr. Peters was suspected of having been deeply concerned in the Kings's death; and it was even alleged that he was one of the persons in mask upon the scaffold, when his Majesty was beheaded. He was accordingly apprehended and committed to the Tower, and on the 13th of October, 1660, was brought to the bar, and indicated for hight treason. He did little more in his own defence than protest his innocence; and when asked why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon him, he only said,—'I will submit myself to God; and if I have spoken anything against the Gospel of Christ, I am heartily sorry for it.' The sentence then passed; and, after being confined in Newgate three days, he was executed.

"The day after his condemnation, he preached to his friends and fellow prisoners in Newgate, on the text—'Why art thou cast down, O my soul?&c. In the early part of his imprisonment, he had suffered not a little from depression, fearing that he should dishonor his religion in sufferings which he anticipated; but, for a short time before he went to the place of execution, his mind became perfectly composed, and he said with great cheerfulness,—'I thank God, now I can die. I can look death in the face and not be afraid.' When the fatal hour arrived, he was carried on a sledge from Newgate to Charing cross,—the place of execution; and was made first to witness the execution of Mr. Cook, the former Solicitor General, who also suffered as a regicide.

"A person now came to him calling upon him, in a tone, of great severity, to repent of the agency he had in the death of the King; but he replied 'Friend, you do not well to trample upon the feelings of a dying man. You are greatly mistaken. I had nothing to do with the death of the king.' When Mr. Cook was cut down, and brought to be quartered, the hangman was commanded to bring Mr. Peters near, that he might witness the spectacle. As the hangman approached him, rubbing his bloody hands together, he said—'How do you like this, Mr. Peters?' To which Mr. Peters replied, 'I thank God, I am not terrified at it, you may do your worst.'

'As he was about to die, he gave a piece of gold to a friend, and requested him to carry it to his daughter as a token of love from her dying father, and to let her know that 'his heart was as full of comfort as it could be, and before that piece should come into her hands, he should be with God in glory.' He went off with a smile upon his countenance, and the language of triumph upon his lips. He suffered October 16, 1660, aged sixty-one years, and his head was set upon a pole on London bridge.

"Mr. Peters, during his imprisonment, wrote certain papers containing advice to his daughter, which were afterwards published under the title—'A dying father's last legacy to an only child.' This daughter was born before Mr. Peters left America; her baptism is found recorded thus in the church record of Salem:—'1640, 1st mo. 8, Eliza, daughter of Mr. Peters.'—After her father's execution, she came to America, according to his advice, was kindly received by his friends, and was married to a respectable gentleman, in Newport, Rhode Island, by the name of Barker. She seems subsequently to have removed to England with her husband, and after she became a widow, had influence enough to recover from the Crown her father's foreign possessions, which had illegally been confiscated.

MEMOIR OF RHODE ISLAND.

Gentlemen,—

Your lines bearing date August 23d, 1683, came to our hands by two of your three messengers John Pynchon, Esq. and Mr. Wm. Wharton, wherein you give us to understand that according to your printed briefs, you convened on the 22d inst. at Mr. Richard Smith's house at Narragansett, for persons to have opportunity to exhibit information and bring in evidence, in his Majestie's behalf, and to prosecute their own claims and that you had accordingly assembled &c., hoping that by our dutiful compliance with his majestie's commands, you might be enabled to make report &c. signifying that after two days attendance here, by our neglect and contempt of his majestie's commission, &c., you were necessitated to adjourn to Boston.

Whereunto we answer, that we are heartily sorry that you should through your unneighborly deportment in this government withold from us the sight of your commission, so to contemn his majestie's authority here, as to hinder us from being serviceable to his majesty therein, and for your slighting his majestie's authority here, have extorted from us a prohibition against your farther proceedings. Notwithstanding we had used all our endeavors, by transporting our records and holding, adjourning and continuing his majestie's general court here, four days time and upwards, in hopes and expectations of your compliance, that might have served his majesty herein, as formerly we have done, and have to show his majestie's gracious letter in approbation thereof: And so we take leave and remain your friends and neighbors.

Foane's house the 24th of August, 1683

By order of the Court,

JOHN POTTER, Clerk."

Major Peleg Sanford was chosen an agent for the Colony, to go to England; and the Governor and Council still continued to exercise the jurisdiction in the Narragansett country, notwithstanding the commission to Gov. Cranfield.

We shall now proceed, by giving the doings of Gov. Cranfield and his associates, who convened at Smith's house, relative to the conflicting claims of R. Island and Connecticut, to the Narragansett country, which we extract from Trumbull's history of Connecticut.

'As there had long been disputes relative to the Narragansett country, and as the king, in consequence of the act of his commissioners in 1665, claimed it as his province, commissioners were appointed to hear and determine all the titles and claims respecting that tract. On the 7th of April, 1683, his majesty King Charles II. granted a commission to Edward Cranfield, Esq, lieutenant governor of New Hampshire, William Stoughton, Joseph Dudley, Edward Randolph, Samuel Shrimpton, John Fitz Winthrope, Edward Palmr, Nathaniel Saltonstall and John Pyncheon, Jun. Esqs or any three of them, of whom Edward Cranfield or Edward Randolph was to be of the quorum, 'to examine and enquire into the respective claims and titles, as well of his majesty as of all other persons and corporations whatsoever, to the immediate jurisdiction, government or propriety of the soil of a certain tract of land, within his majesty's dominion of N. England, called the King's province or Narragansett country; and to call before them any person or persons and to search records, as they shall find requisite, and the proceedings therein with the opinions upon the matters that shall be examined by them, to state, and with all convenient speed report thereof to make to his majesty.'

The commissioners convened, on 22d of August, 1683, at the house of Richard Smith, in the Narragansett country. They summoned all persons and coporations, in whatever place, who were concerned in the title or government of that country, to appear before them and to produce all charters, deeds, records, letters and orders from his majesty and council, or any of his commissioners, to the respective colonies, governors or governments, which might give into motion on the subject. At the time and place appointed, the records represent 'That there was the greatest appearance of the most ancient English and Indians then living, to testify the truth of their knowledge,' respecting the matters then to be determined.

The commissioners having fully heard everything respecting the claims and title to that part of New England, adjourned to Boston, and there made a report to his majesty, in an ample manner declaring, that the government of it belonged to Connecticut. The report, so far as it respects this colony, and can reflect light on the subject, is as followeth:—

'In humble obedience to your commands, we, your majestie's commissioners, have seriously considered the several claims before us. We find that your majesty, by your letters patents, dated at Westminister, the three and twentieth of April, in the fourteenth year of your majestie's reign,

Newport Mercury.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 9, 1857.

PINS have been made successfully in this country, by machinery, for about a period of twenty years, and one of the finest machines for that purpose was made by a Rhode Island man, SAMUEL SLOCUM—and patented in England in 1835.

The wire for pins, which is made of yellow brass, with the addition of a small quantity of zinc and lead, is subjected to fourteen different operations when worked by hand. And first, the workmen straighten it and cut into lengths of three or four pins, producing eighteen or twenty thousand pin lengths in a day. Then the pointing is executed on a grindstone by two men, the one giving the rough point and the other finishing it, when the wires are cut into the proper lengths by an adjusted chisel. Then the heads are twisted out of a finer wire, coiled into a compact spiral (round a wire of the size of the pin, by means of a small lathe, constructed for the purpose) and two turns are dexterously cut off for each head by a skillful workman, who may turn off twelve thousand in the hour. To anneal the heads, they are put into an iron ladle, made red hot over an open fire, and then thrown into cold water; after this they are stamped by the blow of a small ram, and then they are fixed on to the shank by men who make from twelve thousand to fifteen thousand per diem, exclusive of one-thirteenth always deducted for waste.

To clean or yellow the pins, they are boiled for half an hour in sour beer, or solution of tartar, after which they are washed. And to whiten them a stratum of about six pounds of pins is laid on a copper pan, then a stratum of seven or eight pounds of grain tin, and so on, alternately, till the vessel be filled, a pipe being left inserted in the side, to admit of the introduction of water at the bottom without deranging the contents. The vessel is then placed over the fire and when the water becomes hot the surface is sprinkled with four ounces of cream of tartar, and after the expiration of an hour the pins and grains are separated by means of a kind of colander. Then the pins are washed, after which they are dried and polished in a leather sack, filled with coarse bran, winnowed by fanners, and fixed in papers previously pricked for receiving them, which last operation is performed by children, who acquire the habit of putting up thirty-six thousand per day.

This is the process usually employed in making pins by hand; but beautiful inventions have been introduced, which greatly facilitate the operation. During the war of 1812 an attempt was made to introduce the manufacture of pins into New York, but the low prices that followed the declaration of peace were destructive to the enterprise. Several subsequent attempts to carry on the business in this country were made, but with little success till the HOWE manufacturing company set up an invention in 1835, patented by the head of the house, and the same inventor patented another invention (now in use) in 1846, for making solid headed pins. A patent was also obtained in England, in 1835, as we have stated, by SAMUEL SLOCUM, of this State, but in this country he obtained no patent for a machine invented for the same purpose, and which has been successfully run in secret. This last invention has changed hands and is owned by the American Pin Company, and this company and the HOWE Manufacturing Company, with one or two other establishments, make nearly all the pins consumed in the United States. One of these machines turns out two barrels of pins per day, each barrel containing two million pins. It takes the wire from a reel, cuts it into the required lengths, points, heads, and makes a perfect pin by a single operation. From this machine the pins fall into the hopper of the sticking machine, in which they are arranged, stuck into the paper at the rate of three hundred per minute, and come out all perfect, only requiring to be packed, to be ready for market.

It is well known that pins of brass wire are deficient of strength and elasticity, and pins of steel and iron have been introduced as a substitute, but they must be coated with tin. This operation, however, cannot be performed equally well with iron as with brass, and without it the pins have an uneven surface, which renders them inconvenient for use, as they are liable to tear the clothes. To avoid this defect the iron is first covered with a thin coating of copper or other metal having a greater affinity for tin than iron has; but in order that the result should be satisfactorily attained, it is necessary to polish and pickle the pins before coppering them. This is done in a bath prepared for the purpose, and when it is accomplished sulphate of copper, in crystals, is added, and the whole agitated for ten minutes, when a solid coppering will be effected, with a finely polished surface. The pins are then washed in cold water, put into a tray with a hot solution of soap and agitated for a couple of minutes, when they may be dried and tinned in the usual way.

Pins were not known in England till the latter part of the reign of HENRY VIII—1543. The ladies used ribbons, loops and skewers, made of wood, of brass, silver or gold. The pins were at first so ill-made that Parliament enacted none should be made unless they had double heads, "and have the heads soldered fast to the shanks of the pynne." After this act few were made. The "pynners" declared that "sens the making of the saide act there hath been scarcitee of pynnes within the realme, that the kynge's liege people have not been wel nor completely served of pynnes," and they pray that "in consideration thereof, it maie please the king that the act may be adjuged and deemed from henceforth frustrate and nihilated forever."

The North British Mail gives a singular story of a shipwreck eleven years ago, at which time it was supposed the crew perished, and the recent discovery of the whole number, who had fallen into the hands of Moors on the coast of Africa, and had, till recently, been in bondage there. More than a dozen had become widows, and here we give the words of the Mail:—

"Seven of these were said at one time to be located in or near this district. 'But sorrow can never revive the dead, or if it could, hope would prevent our tears;' and so these faithful widows, having exhausted the fountain of their griefs, looked around them for other husbands. And who will dare impugn the wisdom of their resolve? One is said to occupy the same house in East Quay lane she occupied when her dear sailor left her to go on his fatal voyage, and to be now the mother of a family of children by another husband. Another has followed her example in Port-Glasgow. Indeed, no less than six of the widows are said to have become wives again, and to look back upon their early attachments, and the sad voyage which followed, as a little dark episode in their lives, which gradually grows dimmer as years roll over it. But the story goes that a few days ago information has reached the owners of the lost vessel, to the effect that, having been cast away on the African or Morocco coast, the whole crew fell into the hands of a tribe of Moors, who have long held them in captivity; but that they managed to regain their freedom, and if not already in Britain, are on their way hither. It is further said, out of seven supposed widows—widowed by the hypothetical disaster—only one remains a single woman, and she is the wife of the long-lost, though now found, captain of the long-lost ship."

SOME SNAKES.—A gentleman in Oswego County, N. Y., having occasion to make a fire against a projecting ledge of rocks, was surprised to see one snake after another emerge from a hole near the fire, but all of which soon became chilled by the cold and the snow, when they were easily killed.—There were eighteen of them, all rattlesnakes, and the largest, with six rattles, was seven feet three inches in length. Twenty black snakes, measuring in the aggregate, one hundred and twenty-four feet eight inches, were recently killed in the woods, near Guilford, Conn., and at North Carver, Ms., seventeen snakes of the same description were found buried under ground.

We learn that one hundred and thirty vessels passed the light-boat at Brenton's Reef, on the 27th ult., 103 of which were schooners.

The steamer Perry has hauled off to paint and repair, and the New Clifton will supply her place.

A circular has been published in London, in which the following inducements are held out to whalemen to search in the Arctic seas for traces of Arctic explorers who are supposed to have perished there:—

"The whalers are reminded that the following ships were abandoned in the Arctic seas, viz., "Investigator," "Assistance," "Resolute," "Pioneer," and "Intrepid," and that the salvage of the "Resolute," on her recovery by the American ship "George Henry," yielded about £6,000 to her salvors. It may reasonably, therefore, be concluded that a considerable profit would be obtained by the recovery of the hulls and stores of the remaining ships; but, in order that the enquiries thus recommended may not be altogether fruitless in the case of there being no salvage to be effected, Lady Franklin has placed in the hands of the under-mentioned Referees, the sum of £500, one-tenth of which, £50, is offered to such individuals, boats' crews, or ship's company, as shall obtain the first indubitable proof as to which of her Majesty's missing or abandoned ships the above reports refer; and the remaining £450 to such persons as shall discover the position of the "Erebus" or "Terror," or ascertain the fate of any of the one hundred and thirty-five individuals belonging to them yet unaccounted for.

The reward to be divided amongst the persons who shall become entitled to it, in such shares as the referees shall decide. (Signed) Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort, K. C. B. Sir Roderick Murchison, C. G., St. S. Captain Collison, R. N., C. B. Captain Sherard Osborn, R. N., C. B. Referees."

On Sunday evening last there was a very interesting gathering at Zion Church, it being the anniversary of the Mission Society, formed of the members of the Sunday School of that Parish. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. DICKINSON, who addressed the children, followed by Rev. Mr. BREWER, of Emmanuel Church. During the year the children have contributed for missionary purposes about one hundred and twenty-five dollars, and they have entered into the cause with a hearty good will.—The whole services were very interesting, but it must have been a great effort for the speakers to go on when so many permitted themselves to cough long and loud with almost every breath. There is no excuse for this. One cannot always avoid taking cold, and at such times it is almost impossible to keep from coughing, but a person suffering this way has no right to place himself in a position where he must, of necessity, annoy others. If a cold is troublesome, stay away from church or any place where speaking is going on, till it is better; and, of all things, if we must cough or sneeze at such times, there should at least be an effort to suppress it or bury the sound in one's handkerchief. Our remarks are not called forth by an excess of coughing on the evening in question, but we have often seen this lack of attention to the speaker in public places, and have as often intended to call attention to it.

Some of the English journals tell us how elections are conducted in that country, where there is no lack of bribery and quite as much veniality generally in matters of this kind, as elsewhere. The system is pretty well organized, and when one is asked to stand, the first inquiry is whether he will "bleed" freely, and as soon as the fact is satisfactorily ascertained, he finds himself surrounded with a host of friends, prolific in offers of assistance, all of whom are far more interested in the "bleeding," than in the success of the candidate. None but the very rich, at least as regards the metropolis, have a chance, and thus it is that those who have the most money and spend it freely are pretty certain to get in. To successfully oppose the sitting members from Manchester, it was thought necessary to raise twenty thousand pounds, and the sitting members, to retain their seats, had to be at a like expense.—So that all the "pipe laying" is not on this side of the water, and it is barely possible that some of our ideas in regard to the way elections should be conducted, are imported with the electors.

The news from the Sandwich Islands is to the effect that an earthquake, the most severe for many years, has been experienced, and at Honolulu it shook down many old adobes. Muskitoes were very abundant, and the supply far exceeded the demand. The salt water in the neighborhood of the islands is found to be exceedingly corrosive in its nature, so much so that the steam-tug which had recently been hauled out to have her bottom examined, was found with her post-fastenings, boats, &c., entirely rotted off, and her iron rudder actually had a hole eaten through it, though it is two inches thick, and had been in the water only eight months.

About twelve hundred miles from the Hawaiian Islands, a group, named New Nantucket and Jarvis Island, has been discovered and taken possession of by Americans. They are without vegetation, and are covered with bird lime, the accumulation of ages.

Our thanks are due to EDWARD N. FULLER, Esq., of the New Hampshire Gazette for a copy of "The Celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of the introduction of the Art of Printing into New Hampshire, in the city of Portsmouth, Oct. 6. 1856." It is accompanied by a reprint of the first number of the Gazette, for Oct. 7, 1756, on paper made to imitate the sheet then in use, and which reminds us of some of the old copies of the Mercury. This little pamphlet should be preserved, and we have therefore given our copy to the Newport Historical Society.

The rate of heading in the Hoosac tunnel will average about six hundred feet per annum for the past two years, and a calculation based on this makes the time, when the parties working at the opposite extremities will come together, about twenty-two years. A new machine has been constructed at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars, which is expected to cut through twenty-five feet of solid rock in a day. There is still on the ground a discarded machine which cost thirty thousand dollars and was abandoned after it had cut out six feet of the rock.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—On Thursday morning the lot corner of Park street, and belonging to Mr. LEVI JOHNSON, was sold to parties out of the State for twelve cents a foot. It contains about 25,000 ft. The same morning the lot north of it, belonging to Mr. PHILIP CASWELL, was sold for $2,000, or about ten cents a foot, to Mr. WM. J. GLADDING, and the same day Mr. CASWELL sold by auction a number of small lots in the rear, 50x100, at six and three quarter cents, seven, and seven and three quarters. The purchasers were Mr. LEVI JOHNSON and Mr. D. H. BARKER.

The body of a male infant was discovered near Easton's Beach yesterday morning, by some workmen while building a wall. In moving a pile of stones they detected a box, which, on being opened, they found to contain the child, which had been laid there some days previous. A coroner's inquest was held and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR POULTRY.—One or two hen roosts have been robbed during the week, and the thieves have left no clue by which they can be detected. Poultry will command a good price in this market in the course of a few weeks, and the rogues, no doubt, are preparing to supply the market at that time.

The Paris correspondent of the Boston Traveller says that an order has been received by a firm in that city for three thousand tom and pussy cats, for the Australian market. A firm in Lille has received an order for five hundred grimalkins—those of the north of France being in high repute.

Our thanks are due to Mr. A. J. WARD, for a remarkably well lithographed portrait of Rt. Rev. THOMAS M. CLARK, Bishop of R. I., from the picture by HEADE. The execution is very fine and the likeness is correct.

There was a false alarm of fire at half-past one on Monday morning—the work of some wild blades returning home after a Sunday night's carouse, probably.

During the week we have had a "spell" of old fashioned 'lection weather, and every one remarked that it was true to the season.

The first tautog appeared in the market on Monday last. They are late this year.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

Hunt's Merchants' Magazine, for the current month, is embellished with a finely engraved portrait of W. W. Leland, Esq., who, from what we can gather from the biographical notice that accompanies the engraving, must be taken as a fair sample of the universal Yankee:—

"Within the last fourteen years we find him, first, a rotunda-boy in 1838, then, in rapid succession, bar-tender, office-clerk, drygoods clerk, merchant, house and ship builder, ship captain on the great Western lakes, and general speculator in wheat, lands, &c. We next find him laying out cities and building up towns in California, establishing and editing newspapers, digging gold in the gulches and mountains of the Sierra Nevada, traveling through the half civilized wilds of Central and South America, braving the bands of guerrillas, plunging into the silver mines of Mexico, and tasting the fruits of the West India Islands; then—after crossing the Atlantic, crossing the British Channel, crossing the Pyrenees, and taking a general survey of Europe—we at last find him, at the youthful age of thirty-one, connected with one of the most successful and gigantic enterprises of the age, the Metropolitan Hotel."

Mr. Leland is also interested in the Railroad to the Pacific, having previously surveyed the route, and recently he has embarked for Europe, having invested a large sum in the enterprise for raising the Russian fleet at Sevastopol. The leading articles in this number are, Finances and Debts of the Union, Political Economy, Commercial and Industrial cities of the United States, European Commercial Correspondence, Chicago in 1856, &c., &c.

Cyclopedia of Wit and Humor, of America, Ireland, Scotland and England, by William E. Burton. D. Appleton & Co., New York. The mere announcement of a work like this, from the pen of Burton, the popular comedian, will put every one in a good humor, and all who look to it for a spicy dish of wit and drollery will not be disappointed. Mr. Burton has brought together many rare bits that were nearly lost or forgotten, and he promises more of the same sort in the succeeding number. The work will be published in semi-monthly parts, twenty-four in all, at twenty-five cents each, and the whole will be embellished with upwards of six hundred original engravings.

Blackwood's Magazine, for April, is received from Leonard Scott & Company, New York.—Its contents are, All Fool's Day; or the Rival Robbers, A Political Pantomime, Scenes of Clerical Life, part 2 of Mr. Gilfil's Love Story, Afoot, Botany and Brigands in Greece, The Athelings, Part 11, Meleager's Lament for his wife Heliodora, Remonstance with Dickens, Letter No. 3 from a Lighthouse. There is no foreign work that has the same hold on the American reader, and wherever it finds its way it secures a welcome.

The Panorama of Life and Literature, for May, is received from Messrs. Littel & Co. Its opening article is a narrative of Dr. Livingston's Discoveries in South Central Africa, from 1849 to 1856. And with this it offers a number of articles gleaned from Chambers' Journal, the Athenæum, Spectator, Examiner, and last, but not least, Punch, together with shorter articles, poetry, &c., making a cheap collection of good matter.

The Schoolfellow for May. This beautiful little work for children continues to merit all the praise that has been bestowed upon it. The illustrations, which are numerous, are excellent, and the text is admirably adapted to the wants of the little ones.

Littell's Living Age, for the week, has an article on Robert Hall, by Henry Rogers, Judas the Apostle, Picturesque Sins, Ruth, conclusion of Fortunes of Glencore, Discoveries in Chaldea, &c.

THE NEW JERSEY PEARL FISHERY is a reality. A few pearls of very large size have been found, and great numbers of smaller ones, and the neighboring population have turned out almost in mass, leaving their former peaceful avocations for the uncertain business of pearl fishing. The New York Tribune gives the following account of the first discovery:

"The discovery of the first pearl was purely accidental, the Jerseymen no more supposing that pearl-oysters existed in their fresh-water brooks than that diamonds grew on their peach trees, or that every head of cabbage in the land was stuffed with rubies of emeralds. In the latter part of February, Mr. David Howell, a poor shoemaker of Paterson, finding work scarce, money hard to get and bread difficult to procure without either, at the suggestion of a neighbor, collected a quantity of muscles from a little stream known as the Notch Brook to make a dainty meal for himself and family. He first boiled the shell-fish, but finding that a single cooking did not render them tender and palatable, he afterwards fried the same over in fat, which so far softened their obduracy as to render them eatable. In the course of the repast, Howell discovered in one of the muscles a stony substance of a spherical shape and of considerable size. Having some vague ideas upon the subject of jewels, he preserved the curious stone and submitted it to a jeweler for examination. He was then informed that the stone was a genuine pearl, of dimensions which dealers in precious stones considered fabulous until the specimen was placed before their eyes, and had not its lustre been utterly ruined by the culinary operations to which it had been subjected, would have been worth as least $25,000. Here was Cleopatra outdone with a vengeance. She regaled her sweetheart Antony with a few small pearls dissolved in a vinegar stew, and for this trifle the carping world has called her extravagant. What will they now say of the Jersey journeymen shoemaker who served up to the partner of his bosom for lunch a $25,000 pearl in a fried clam?

Mr. David Howell, this fortunate, unfortunate, resolved to make the best of his happy, unhappy fortune. He accordingly sold the big pearl for twenty-five or thirty dollars, as a curiosity, and, recalling to mind the old proverb: "There are as good fish in the sea as have ever been caught," he took off his coat, and set to work to find more. He has since that time abjured the lapstone, and successfully continued his search for the treasures. His labors have been rewarded by the discovery of a number of smaller pearls of considerable value, none of them, however, approaching in size the first one; although he considers even these smaller ones too costly for his own private table, and has disposed of them to persons who could better afford all the delicacies of the season, and who are at perfect liberty to cook them, if they think fit.

The news of Mr. Howell's fortune soon leaked out, his neighbors became interested in the matter, and resolved also to go pearl-fishing. Messrs. Jacob Quackenbush, a boss carpenter, of Paterson, and his brother John, went on an Exploring Expedition in the Notch Brook, and found several of the valuable gems, and among them the largest one which has yet been offered for sale, and which was purchased at a risk by Tiffany & Co., for $900, and is valued by the present holder at $1,500, and it is not impossible may yet be disposed of for a much larger sum. The other smaller ones found by Mr. Quackenbush and his brother were sold for sums ranging from $5 to $75 each. It is the intention of Tiffany & Co., to send the large one to Paris to find a market, and it is not at all impossible that the big Jersey pearl may yet adorn an Imperial diadem."

The art of perfumery, though in its use so essentially frivolous, is of some importance nationally. British India and Europe consume about one hundred and fifty thousand gallons of handkerchief perfumes yearly; and the English revenue from eau de Cologne alone is about eight thousand a year. £9766 flowed into Britannia's pocket in 1852, simply from the duty on imported essential oils, 195,346 pounds weight of which landed on those shores. And the total revenue from imported perfumes is estimated at about forty thousand pounds per annum, including the spirits used for the home manufacture.—So that we need not sneer at the art as wholly frivolous; it has its uses and its advantages as well. And, practically, all things are better for a little adventitious perfumes. Linen, paper, houses, persons—all are improved by a little scent; and if coarse people overdo the quantity, and distort what was intended for refinement into vulgarity, the fault is theirs, not their material.

RETURN OF WHALERS.—For the past few days, we have been enabled to chronicle the arrival of but a small number of whalers, owing, partly, to contrary winds and weather. Yesterday, however the wind changed, the fog cleared up, and we have to report, as may be seen under our marine head, the arrival of ten whalers at this port. It is seldom that so large a number arrive in one day. The ships for the greater part, have been successful, bringing up in the aggregate 870 barrels sp, and 17,750 do. of whale oil, and 79,000 pounds of bone, exclusive of oil and bone sent home. These arrivals, while they add to the wealth of New Bedford, give a fresh impetus to its business operations, and infuse a spirit of enterprise into every department.—New Bedford Mercury 7th.

DEATH OF J. K. ANGELL ESQ.—Joseph K Angell Esq., of Providence, was prostrated by an apoplectic stroke on Friday afternoon last, while in the street during a brief visit to Boston, and died in a few hours. Mr. Angell, though not known as a practising lawyer, was the author of several legal works which are of high authority, and have done much to give our State a share of legal reputation. He had just finished his 63d year, having been born in Providence in 1794. So suddenly was he called away that the strangers who kindly cared for him after he was struck down, knew not who or whence he was until after his death. The Providence Bar have passed suitable resolutions on the melancholy occasion.

If the distillers of whiskey who use strychnine are extensive owners of hogs, they havn't made much by introducing the poison. The Cincinnati Gazette says that at Ingraham's distillery, from the 1st of August to the 24th of October, 1285 hogs died. At the distillery in Pittsburg since the 18th of October, 2576. Mr. Pate, of Rising Sun, lost 500, Messrs. Gaff, of Aurora, 4546. At New Richmond, since the Strychnine disease made its appearance, 10,435 have died, and in the vicinity of Aurora 6000 have died; making an aggregate, so far as accounts have been received, of 60,000 hogs, valued at $300,000, and when fatted would have been worth $650,000.

QUEEN VICTORIA has given to the British nation another Princess, and the bulletins issued by the Royal physicians from Buckingham Palace reports favorably of her Majesty's recovery and the well doing of the "little stranger." Under the advice of Dr. Snow, her Majesty was kept under the influence chloroform, with few intermissions, for three hours, with the happiest results.

It may be necessary to remind the public that the Queen and Prince Albert have been providentially blessed in their family circle. They are now the parents of nine children, and they have had to mourn the loss of none. The eldest of the royal children, the Princess Royal, is 17, years of age, the Prince of Wales is 16, the Princess Alice 14, Prince Alfred 13, the Princess Helena 11, Princess Louisa 9, Prince Arthur 7, and Prince Leopold 4.—In all, four sons and five daughters.

In the political world there was a great lull.

Among the other rumors it is reaffirmed that France and England are mediating in the Spanish Mexican quarrel; that Napoleon intends shortly to visit Algiers; that the Four Powers, wearied of the Neufchatel trifling, were about to impose terms on Prussia and Switzerland; and that the French will heartily co-operate in further English operations in China.

The English elections are nearly over, some fifteen returns of Irish members yet to be heard from. The London Star gives the following classification, showing that the professed adherents to the Premier, although the largest party in the Commons, are in a minority in the House:—

Palmerstonians	274	Reforms,	91
Derbyites,	223	Liberal Conservatives,	45

Including the Radicals, Derbyites and Liberal Conservatives as forming the Opposition, the numbers according to the Star, would be; Opposition 365; Ministerial 275.

Parliament was to re-assemble on the 30th of April.

THE NAVAL COURTS.—Much credit is given to Secretary Toucey for the order recently issued by him, through the agency of which any officer who applies may be furnished with a copy of specific charges against him, or may, without the charges, sue before the Court of Inquiry and prove his fitness in all respects for the service. The retiring board did not, it is stated, keep a record of the allegations upon which they acted. This course was most remarkable, all the circumstances considered. In the first place, the arraigned were tried in the dark, and without counsel. The accusers were not known to them; and when dismissed or furloughed, no record was to be found. A stronger specimen of injustice cannot be quoted in the annals of any country. It would seem, however, according to the order of Secretary Toucey, that the department is prepared to furnish charges in most of the cases. The number of applications for redress by the court has, so far, been a hundred and twenty, besides those who were at sea and were allowed a further time for application.

THE NEW CENT—SILVER CHANGE.—The Philadelphia mint will begin on the 25th day of May to pay out cents of the new issue, in exchange for Spanish and Mexican dollars, 25, 12 1-2 and 6 1-4 cent pieces, and at the nominal rates, or in exchange for the copper cent now in circulation. Persons applying will be attended to in order, daily, between the hours of nine and two o'clock. The silver or copper coins must be presented in even sums of five dollars, and for the present not exceeding fifty dollars. Pieces of silver mutilated or so much worn as to be inegible, will not be received; but packages containing the same may be exchanged at another office in the mint for silver coins of the United States. Five dollars in count of old quarters, which will weigh over $4 80 American coin; of eights weighing over $4 50; and of sixteens, weighing over $4 30, will be received at the nominal value for the new cents.

WHAT WE THINK OF OUR RELIGION.—A distinguished minister of the Gospel stated a fact during the course of a very able sermon on Sunday last, illustrative of the difference between profession and practice. We profess to hold our religion dearer to us than any other consideration, and enjoy the exercise of the house of worship more than any other pursuit. At a benefit at the theatre on Friday evening last, however, all the seats in the immense building were "taken," while the regular weekly prayer meeting in a popular church was attended by five devoted individuals, including the colored sexton and the distinguished divine! We show our appreciation of histrionic talent but prayer-meeting don't seem to draw much.

A RARE FISH.—We noticed on Simpson's barrow, at the corner, last Monday, a fish we had sometimes heard of, but never before seen It was caught at the south side of the Island by Mr. Thomas McCleave; and is called the Fire-Eater, or Johnny Malonger. The fish is a native of the coast of Brazil, was about fifteen inches in length, of a reddish-yellow color, and shaped something like an eel, but rather larger round in proportion to its length; and displayed a set of teeth that plainly showed its owner was not subject to the tooth-ache. How it came such a distance from its native water we cannot imagine.—Nantucket Mirror.

VESSELS OF WAR FOR CHINA.—The frigates Minnesota and Mississippi, and the sloop of war Germantown, are now fitting out with all dispatch to reinforce our squadron in the Chinese Seas, which is at present much too small to protect the extended commerce of the United States now employed in the waters of China.

When the vessels arrive out there we shall have a force of one hundred and twenty-seven guns on that station, most of which are of the heaviest calibre; and if their services should be required, the Celestials will find them weighty arguments in our favor.

The famine in Finland continues its horrors in spite of the aid which wealthy Russians have given. Subscriptions in St. Petersburg in aid of the sufferers amounted to 70,000 roubles silver. In Helsingfors a single merchant gave 10,000, and Baron Steiglitz, the court banker, 5000 roubles. In the north of Sweden the famine is equally as bad, and among the Laplanders children had gnawed their own hands from hunger, and adults had died from starvation, while striving to prolong life with handfuls of straw.

The agricultural bureau of the Patent Office has made arrangements for the introduction and cultivation of sixteen more varieties of the Sorghum sucre, or sugar cane.

In the course of the last quarter there were sold by the New York City Post Office, postage stamps to the value of $114,500.

The Walker News by the Empire City is exceedingly disastrous to that chieftain, as all his Atlantic resources were cut off. The New Orleans dispatch says—

The Empire City brings one hundred of Col. Lockbridge's men. Seventy other fillibusters, including Generals Hornby, and Wheat, took passage at Aspinwall in the Illinois, for New York. Others remained at Aspinwall, awaiting a passage home.—Col. Lockridge's retreat is confirmed.

The Costa Ricans have taken possession of Punta Arenas, and the steamer Rescue, with a great amount of ammunition and six pieces of artillery. Col. Lockridge's men were taken to Aspinwall by British vessels.

The J. L. Stephens brought to Aspinwall no further reliable intelligence from Gen. Walker.

Private dispatches received from Aspinwall state that his position at Rivas is impregnable, and that he was likely to hold out for months. These same dispatches confirm the previous reports of a battle between his forces and the allies at San Jorge, and state that another attack was expected about the 20th of April. The Transit route is open to the Pacific.

This is enough to show that all the Atlantic assistance to Walker has broken to pieces, and that the only hope for him is that of receiving assistance on the Pacific side, which is very frail and uncertain. Gen. Walker's brother died on the Empire City, on the 26th ult.

IMMENSE TELEGRAPHIC ENTERPRISE.—We learn from a gentleman in the way of receiving authentic intelligence on the subject, that a number of gentlemen of this city, interested in the telegraphic business, have a project on foot to connect New York and San Francisco direct by a line of telegraph.

The plan is not yet fully matured, but when perfected, it will embrace a preliminary expedition under the auspices and protection of the government party, which is soon to start on an engineering tour for the purposes of laying out (under the recent act of Congress) a military road to the Pacific.

The telegraphic party, which is to accompany the military expedition, will probably consist of some forty or fifty persons, and will be amply provided with mules and camels for the purpose of crossing the continent with safety and dispatch. The party will start from Omaha city in Nebraska (to be connected by telegraph with St. Louis,) follow the Platt river to the South Pass, and thence direct to San Francisco.

This is an immense enterprise, and one which requires a large outlay of labor and capital. Should it prove successful, and the submarine telegraph be laid successfully in July, London and San Francisco will be in hailing distance of each other, and the quotations on Change in the metropolis of Europe will be bulletined in the Golden City within an hour.

A FRIENDS' PREACHER.—The quarterly meeting of Friends in Dover, N. H., was held last week, and the following account of Dr. Toby, of Providence, R. I., who presided, is given in the Boston Traveller:—

Dr. Toby of Providence, R. I., who preached at this Dover meeting, is now the leader of the sect in New England.—His history is romantic. As the daughter of Moses Brown, the millionaire, was once travelling in her carriage among the Green Mountains, a ragged little boy was struck by one of the wheels and his leg was broken. The heart of the young Quaker preacher for such she was, bled for the little unfortunate. She had him taken home in her carriage and faithfully attended. Desirous of remedying so far as possible, a misfortune that might disqualify him for getting his livelihood as a farmer she took him home provided his education, and enabled him to study a profession in which he rapidly rose and soon stood at its head in the City of Providence. In the meantime he had come out as a preacher in the denominations of his patrons.

CARELESSNESS IN MAILING LETTERS.—On Tuesday, a letter containing a draft for $12,000, was dropped in the post-office, in this city, to be sent to New York.—When the time arrived for its delivery in New York, it was not forthcoming, and a telegraphic dispatch was sent to the firm in this city mailing it, to ascertain the cause of its non-arrival. The gentleman who posted the letter rushed to the post-office, much excited, and on making inquiries, a search was instituted and the letter found, it not having been sent in consequence of no postage stamp having been placed upon it. Letters of this kind and others with no direction upon them, are dropped at the office every day. A little care upon the part of correspendents would save much trouble to themselves and the officials at the post-office.—Phil. Ledger.

AN OLDEN TIME.—One day last week while laborers were engaged in grading a lot in South Wheeling, from which a small mound was removed several years since, four large skeletons were found, laid with their heads together, and their feet pointed to the four points of the compass. In the centre was found a shovelful of stone beads, cylindrical and resembling pieces broken off from a pipe stem. We do not remember to have ever read of the discovery of mound-buried skeletons disposed in the above described position. Were they buried by the builders of the other mounds, which have puzzled our antiquarians?—Wheeling Times.

A post mortem examination of Mr. Montgomery, the member of Congress lately deceased, at Danville, Pa., says the Danville American, exhibited extensive abrasions of the mocus or lining coat of the stomach, and the entire destruction of the membrane, both at the cardiac and pyloric orifice, with a general loss of tone, or disorganization of the thoracic and abdominal viscera. The physician ascribes his death to poison. Mr. Montgomery stopped at the National Hotel, Washington, during the inauguration.

A CURIOUS PHYSIOLOGICAL FACT.—Dr. Hunter says that women who love their husbands generally lie upon the right side. (No allusion to mendacity.) We know not the why, but suppose that they who lie on the left side disorder their livers, and consequently become so ill-tempered as to drive their husbands to evil courses—and, pray, what woman would then love her "better half?" Ladies see that you lie correctly.

SUICIDE.—In Tiverton, near Bliss's Corners, on Saturday morning last, Mrs. Manchester, widow of the late Isaac Manchester, committed suicide by hanging. The fatal act was committed in her bed-room, the door of which was found locked.—Mrs. M. had been a widow for about two years. She resided with her son, who is married.

OBITUARY.

ELIZABETH SHERMAN.

"I heard a voice from Heaven, saying unto me Write, Blessed are the dead, which die in the Lord; yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

The mere notice of the decease and age of her whose name is at the head of this notice, which has already appeared in this and other periodicals of the city, would, by no means, satisfy the wishes or the expectations of the community, and especially the Christian portion of it, where, for forty years, she has been so well and so favorably known. True had she been consulted in reference to this matter, and her consent solicited in connection with her decease, to append a brief sketch of her conversion and subsequent life, she would almost certainly have replied, 'I beg you will not think of it; I am unworthy of any such notice.' But should one she loved as a Christian, have added then you will deny your bretheren this gratification, and refuse this testimony for your Savior? Who that was acquainted with 'sister Betsey,' will not in their imagination, notice that embarassed look, and anticipate the reply—'I submit my own to the better judgement of my Brethren.' Oh! how frequently have we witnessed such instances of self sacrifice for the love she bore to her brethren and her Savior. So used was she to surrender her own, for the opinions of others, where concience and duty were not to be sacrificed, that it might almost be said of her that she had no will of her own; but where these were interfered with, no one was more uncompromising.

Taking it for granted, then, that she would not seriously object to such use of her life, written as briefly as possible, it is furnished accordingly.

In the year 1817, while sitting in the house of God, and listening to a discourse on a funeral occasion, delivered by the venerable Rev. Dan'l Webb, truth was uttered with such force, and pressed with such earnestness, that the depth of human depravity and the holiness of God's law was held up to her conscience in such awful contrast, that she beheld her lost and ruined situation, and most earnestly enquired, 'what must I do to be saved.' Instructed by this man of God, this messenger of mercy to her soul, she immediately sought, and soon obtained that evidence of pardon and acceptance through faith in Christ, 'which the world can neither give nor take away.' Renewed and changed from nature to grace, from sin to holiness, she became 'a new creature,' and from that hour we find her a constant learner in the school of Christ. True, her natural timidity and diffidence, together with a keen sense of unworthiness, had so stamped her mind with the impression that she was 'the least of all Saints,' that it required no ordinary effort for her to declare in public 'what Jesus had done for her soul.' But duty predominated, the 'love of Christ constrained her', and she dare not refuse her testimony in favor of that gospel which is the 'power of God unto salvation to every one who believeth.'

She 'conferred not with flesh and blood,' but immediately united herself as a probationer with the Methodist Episcopal Church, went forward in all the ordinances, and in January 1818, was admitted to full membership in the same; and so punctual and scrupulous was she in the observance of the stated means of grace, enjoined by the discipline of her communion, that it is confidently believed that she was never absent from her class or other meetings, when a good and sufficient reason for such absence could not be given. Nor was her devotions confined to the outward means of grace. There was with her even a more sacred place. In the closet a more close and intimate communion with her Lord and Savior was ever kept up; and here she obtained that strength, which kept her from declension in the day of adversity, and enabled her to be as firm and consistent when others disgraced their profession, as when the multitude shouted Hosanna. Nor was our sister a bigot—true she loved the doctrine and the discipline of her Church honestly, and conciently believing them of superior adaptation to meet the wants and the necessities of a fallen and perishing world; but this conviction did not abridge her love for other branches of the Christian church, whose prosperity was always a cause of joy to her heart. She loved the Savior's image wheresoever and by whomsoever reflected.—Color, race nor condition destroyed her sense of obligation, or confined her labors. Their salvation was as dear as if more favorably situated; she had a heart to sympathize with the unfortunate, as well as a hand ready to extend relief.

But there was one place where her affections found a centre, and where her efforts were constant and untiring—that place was her home. Nor did she labor there in vain. Souls in Heaven, as well as on earth, testify to her faithfulness and her dying affection. When shall the others be converted and reclaimed which her faith and love embraced?

On Monday, the 4th inst, her body was committed to the earth, there to await its call to resurrection. The services of the occasion were all performed at the house, in consequence of the inclemency of the weather. They were conducted by Rev. Mr. Talbot in a most solemn and impressive manner, and were no doubt profitable to all who were permitted to be present. M.

A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR.

"The improved Rosemary, as now made by J. Russell Spalding, combines everything (in our opinion) required to give richness, beauty, and elegance to the hair. It is neat and clean, free from all injurious minerals and oils, and can do no possible harm. The perfume is delicate and agreeable. We advise all to use it who desire a clean, healthy scalp, and beautiful head of hair."

For forcing the growth of the hair, preventing its falling off, and restoring it to bald places, this simple mixture of

has probably been used with as much success as any known article.

POSITIVE EVIDENCE.—The following persons can be found, or their certificates shown:—Mrs. L. Sweeny, 25 Rowe street, Boston—restored hair to bald head, and from grey to black color; Rev. C W Dennison, Buffalo, N Y; Francis Adams, Esq, Proprietor of Morning news; Rev S Cobb, Editor Christian Freeman; Benjamin Seavey, Bromfield House—all in Boston. Mr Heffman, Editor of German paper, and his wife, Eva, say it is the best article for the hair to be found, and they "have tested foreign articles—we can recommend it with our best conciences;" Mrs. D. Taft, Cambridge, Mass; A. F. Wood, New Haven, Conn; Hon. Charles Hunt, Lowell, Mass; Daniel B. Conner, 212 Congress street, Boston; C. H. Stocking, Esq., Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., all say it is excellent. Certificates by hundreds could be added to the list, if space would permit. They can be shown to convince all that this popular preparation is decidedly one of the nicest and best articles in the world, for THE HAIR.

Call for J RUSSELL SPALDING'S ROSEMARY and take no other. Price 25 cents and $1 per bottle.

J Russell Spalding, 27 Tremont street, opposite Museum, Boston, Mass., U. S. A., proprietor, where all orders should be addressed.

JAMES PYLE'S DIETETIC SALERATUS is acknowledged by all who try it, the purest and best article in use. It is entirely free from the caustic impurities of common Saleratus, so destructive to the digestive organs, while for making Biscuit, Cake and all kinds of Pastry admirably light, it excells the best baking soda, and requires less shortening to produce the desired richness. Parents who regard their childrens health, should use no other.

It is sold at all the groceries, in 1 lb., 1-2 lb., and 1-4 lb packages, with the name of JAMES PYLE thereon, without which none is genuine.

INVIGORATOR,
OR LIVER REMEDY.

IS REQUIRED TO CURE ONE TROUBLED with Liver Complaints, unless the most desperate of cases, when the SECOND bottle will, with scarce a single failure, restore the patient to health and vigor. We wish to call the attention of all to these facts, that the invigorator is compounded by a physicain who has used it in his practice for the past twenty years with a success almost credulous, and that it is entirely vegetable, being composed wholy of gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known one bottle of the invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of calomel without any of its deleterious effects.

It must be known that all these are Liver diseases, or caused by a deranged Liver, and to cure them needs a LIVER medicine and one of great power. The invigorator is such a medicine; it has medicinal powers, never before discovered, that will cure all diseases of the Liver, no matter of how long standing, or what may be their form. The active medicinal virtues extracted from the gums used, is such as to be astonishing to all who see their effects, for none can use the medicine without receiving benefit. It acts as a gentle cathartic, and should always be taken in sufficient quantities to operate on the bowels gently. The best way to take it is to take the medcine in the mouth, and then take some water and swallow both together. In this way the medicine will scarcely be tasted.

PROFESSOR O. J. WOOD'S
HAIR RESTORATIVE.
FOR PRODUCING HAIR ON BALD HEADS, AND RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL COLOR.
THIS ASTONISHING AND UNEQUALED PREPARATION has never failed to produce a growth on bald heads when used according to the directions, and turn hair back to its original color, after having become gray and reinstate it in all its original health, lustre, softness and beauty. Removes at once all scurf, dandruff and unpleasant itching, scrofula, eruptions and feverish heat from the scalp. It also prevents the hair from becoming unhealthy and falling off, and hence acts as a perfect

HAIR INVIGORATOR AND TONIC.

A gentleman in Boston writes to his friend in New Bedford thus:—

To your inquiries, I would reply, that when I first commenced using Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, my hair was almost white, and had been so for the last ten years and it was very thin on the top of my head, and very loose, and pulled out freely, but I found that before I had used all the second bottle, (which was eight weeks,) my hair was entirely changed to its original color, light brown, and is now free from dandruff and quite moist. I have had my hair cut five or six times since the change, and have never seen anything like white hair starting from the roots; and it is now as thick as ever it was, and does not come out at all. It has proved in my case all that I could wish to ask.
July 1, 1855. Yours, etc.——

[From the Boston Herald.]
SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.—By using Prof. Wood's Hair Restorative, gray hair can be permanently restored to its original color. The subjoined certificate from Johnson & Stone, Gardiner, Maine, is but one of the many instances that are daily coming to our knowledge, of its wonderful effects. It is no longer problematical, but a self-evident truth, as hundreds in our community can testify.

Gardiner, Maine, June 22, 1855.
Dear Sir: I have used two bottles of Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and can truly say it is the greatest discovery of the age for restoring and changing the hair. Before using it, I was a man of seventy. My hair has now attained its original color. You can recommend it to the world without the least fear, as my case was one of the worst kind.
Yours respectfully,
Prof. O. J. Wood. DANIEL N. MURPHY,

BROOKFIELD, Massachusetts, January 12, 1855.
Dear Sir:—Having made a trial of your Hair Restorative, it gives me pleasure to say that its effect has been excellent in removing inflamation, dandruff, and a constant itching tendency, with which I have been troubled from childhood; and has also restored my hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color. I have used no other article with anything like the pleasure and profit. Yours truly,
J. K. BRAGG.
Pastor of the Orthodox Church, Brookfield.
Professor Wood.

[From the Missouri Democrat.]
WOOD'S HAIR DYE.—This admirable article is rapidly improving the hair. No article of a similar kind, now before the public, enjoys a better reputation as a restorative & invigorating hair tonic. Its peculiar chemical qualities have a beneficial effect upon the growth and character of the hair, giving a glossy texture to that which was formerly of a coarse and dry nature. It has, also, we understand, a tendency to preserve the youthful color and appearance of the hair, and destroying or counteracting the effects of age. With such recommendations in its favor, we hardly perceive how any lady or gentleman should be without so valuable an adjunct to their toilet.

BROWNELL'S VENTILATOR.
PATENTED SEPT. 16, 1856.

The following is a list of sizes with the price of each annexed, of BROWNELL'S VENTILATOR which for all purposes where ventilation and a strong draf are required; and are particularly designed for Rail Road Cars, Public Buildings, Smoky Chimnies & Caboose & Cabin pipes

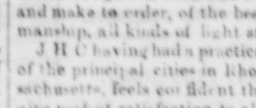

The advantage proposed by this ventilator over all others is, it gives a uniform draft to a chimney, and at the same time excludes water, thus doing away with two great evils—a back draft and drippings down the chimney. The arrangement of this ventilator is very simple; it can be easily adjusted to any use for which it may be required, and it is not liable to get out of order.

THE NEWEST AND GREATEST IMPROVEMENT.
THE MELAINOTYPE.
THE MELAINOTYPE possesses excellencies that none of the rest have, and very much resemble a painting on ivory, so clear is it in its lineal relations, so vigorous in tone, and so just an expression; several of our principal artists have highly lauded the Melainotype and declared it equal to painting, with twice its accuracy.— It is not affected by light, rain, atmosphere, or acids, several of them having been exposed for a number of months on the roof of a building without the least change in their beauty or shades; they are now being taken on a metalic plate so that they may be sent in a letter without danger or expense of postage being no more than the charged for a letter.

LOTTERIES.
The Lotteries of Samuel Swan & Co. are chartered by the State of Georgia, and have sworn commissioners appointed to superintend their drawings, and certify that everything connected with the same is done in a strictly honorable manner. They offer to the public a fair opportunity for investment, the interests of parties at a distance being as well protected as though they were present. The Managers would respectfully call attention to the fact that all persons have a legal right to send orders for tickets to Georgia, as the lotteries of Samuel Swan & Co. are authorized by the Legislature of that State. A lottery will be drawn every Saturday throughout the year, all orders received being filled in the drawing next to take place after the same comes to hand. According to the scheme one ticket in every ten must draw a prize. Tickets are $10; halves $5; quarters, $2 50. No tickets sent unless the money accompanies the order. The drawings are upon the principle of one number on each ticket, and are so simple that none can fail to understand them. There is no combination of numbers to mystify the buyer. Prizes vary from $40 to $50 00; every prize being drawn, and result of drawing forwarded to all purchasers.

GREEN SAND MARL OF NEW JERSEY.
THE NEW JERSEY FERTILIZER COMPANY is now prepared to receive orders for this important manure. For all lands upon which ashes are beneficial the Marl is more than a substitute.
Prof. Cook in his Annual Report to the Legislature of New Jersey says: "the value of these Marls is best seen in the rich and higly cultivated district which has been improved, almost made, by their use: but it may be interesting to examine the causes of their great value in Agriculture, and to compare them with other fertilizers. For example: The potash alone may be taken at an average of five per cent. of the whole weight of the Marl, a bushel when dry weighing eighty pounds, and in the proportion mentioned would contain four pounds of potash: this is nearly as much as there is in a bushel of unleached wood ashes." And again—it is probable that the great value of the Marl is to be found in the fact that it contains nearly all the substances necessary to make up the ash of our common cultivated plants.
Price, delivered on board vessel at the wharves of the Company at Portland Heights on Raritan Bay, New Jersey, seven cents per bushel. For further particulars, see circulars, sent free of postage. Orders for other fertilizers will receive prompt attention. Address either of the undersigned,
N. B.—Those wishing Marl for Spring use, should order immediately to secure its early shipment. Orders will be filled in rotation.

ARE MADE TO
CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK
Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.
Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.
PITTSBURG, PA., May 1, 1855.
DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.
Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREBLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Billious Disorders and Liver Complaints.
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., 7 Feb., 1856.
SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of billious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.
Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.
POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 15, 1855.
DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.
GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood
From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.
DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.
DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.
From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.
DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.
From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.
PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.
HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

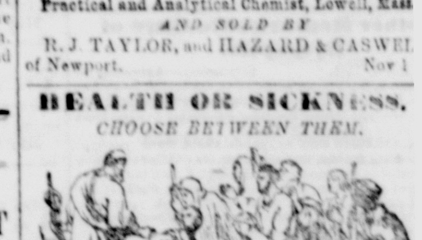

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Dec., 1855.
DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.
For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.
Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.
Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skillful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL FOR THE RAPID CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.
We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, nor neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralize the principle of disease, and thus radically cure the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localites.
ALARMING DISORDERS.
Dyspepsia, and derangement of the Liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.
General Weakness---Nervous Complaints
When all other stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.
DELICATE FEMALES.
All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensative organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild but infallable alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her childrens health should fail to have them within her reach.

BOARDING FOR INVALIDS.
THE SUBSCRIBER would hereby inform the public that he is conveniently and pleasantly situated on the Paradise Road, in Middletown, and that he has been for some time accustomed to the care of Invalid Boarders.
His accommodations are not all occupied, that he can receive, as he would like to do, persons whose health disables them from taking care of themselves. The terms are reasonable and the attention and accommodations warranted satisfactory.
